The Trofalgar and Nile, which are now being completed at Portsmouth and Pembroke Dockyards respectively, have each one very weak spot which has been repeatedly pointed out by naval men. The armour on the sides, bulkheads, and turrets is good and all that can be desired, but between the turrets, high above the armour plates, there is a central battery to contain twelve 100-fb. breechloaders, the sides of which are only of half-inch steel platingi.c., able to be swept by the lightest machine-guns. The recent experimental firing at the Resistance has shown conclusively that even very thin armour is of very great value, for many shelis fired obliquely at the old hulk were harmlessly divorted by her soft iron plates three and four inches thick. As a preliminary to making use of this very practical experience, the Admiralty authorities have ordered calculations to be made of the increased submergence of the hulls which would result from plating the upper central batteries with three-inch steel-faced armour. If the effect of the additional weight will only be a small extra draft, the armour will be built on.

THE THIBETAN DIFFICULTY.

The continued inaction on the part of the Tibetans at the Jalon Pass proves conclusively that their boast of driving Colonal Graham's force from Gnatong and invading Bengal itself was an idle one. If the reports from various sources are to be believed, the Lamas have with much difficulty been able to collect from 10,000 to 15,000 men, and even to drag a few uscless cannon to their entrenchments; but having done this, they have still hegitated to take the initiative, and they are now likely to find themselves attacked instead of having the advantage of acting on the offensive. Their hesitation has enabled reinforcements to be pushed up to Guatong, and they have thus lost their only opportunity of inflicting even slight damage upon our troops. . Had the Tibetans made a determined assault upon Gnatong on the 21st ultimo, the date upon which it was expected, and at the same time thrown forward 2,000 or 3,400 men to cut the line of communication, they might have done considerable mischief. though we do not for a moment imply that they could have stormed Colonel Graham's mission met yesterday. So far their leaders keep the mass of their men well in reserve on the Chumbi side of the Jalep, trusting perhaps to the natural difficulties of the ground to hinder Colonel Graham's advance; but they may change their tactics when they see that their defensive position is being attacked in carnest. If they mass their levies in the Constantinople, Sept. 12 -Owing to Jalep and on the alopes dominating it they luckily found a man who happened to be Signor Crispi citing Article 10 of the Sucz will simplify matters very materially, for passing the cating-house just after the com- Canal Convention in support of the Italian such a loss can then be inflicted by Colonel plainant left it and noticed a man who was action at Massowali, the Porte insists on Graffam's force as should convince them of going in front carrying a lantern stoop a pending a decaration; explaining the the hopelessness of further fighting. In either case, however, our troops cannot halt on the Jalep; they must push on, whether they encounter resistance or not, and break up the armed gathering in the Chumbi Valley. It would be a false move merely to clear. the pass and then retire to Gnatong, for in such a case only a temporary effect would be produced. If Tibetan influence in London, Sept. 14 - 3 sum of six hundred | Sikkim is to be swept away the Tibetans must be driven back to the uplands of their own country and not be allowed to menace the frontier with the mob which they are pleased to call an army. Their presence, in the Chumbi Valley, not an integral part of the Tibet plateau at all, can only serve to prolong the guerilla warfare which they have forced upon the Indian Government; and not until they are in full flight northwards can any solution of the existing difficulty be rendered possible. The Government have no more desire or intention of invading Tibet than they had in March last, but operations of war must be carried out on common sense principles, and it would be absurd to carry the Jalep sangras London, Sept. 15 .-- Mr William Red- and not to push forward to complete the disnersal of the defending force.
